The Future of Regional Cohesion Policy

Cohesion Policy is a fundamental pillar of the EU that established the link between the EU, regions, and its citizens in line with EU principles of solidarity and subsidiarity. Tackling the economic and social disparities between regions is a stated goal of the European project since the Treaty of Rome. Territorial imbalances remain a major challenge for the European Union. They should therefore remain a top priority for the EU in order to enhance equal opportunities for all citizens and allowing all its regions to reach their potential.

SESSION 1

The Role of Local Administration in Development and Resilience

Regional and local administration authorities play a significant role in the everyday lives of citizens and businesses since they absorb the greatest part of Business-to-Government and Citizen-to-Government transactions. The responsibilities of the Greek local and regional authorities are broad, from civil protection to building the environment and from environmental protection to social welfare. In the recent past, a series of reforms have been implemented. Despite these changes, there are still a number of financial and institutional constraints regarding a series of responsibilities. Given the digital transformation of Public Administration due to the pandemic, the need for interventions that provide solutions to the existing problems that local administration faces are prominent.

SESSION 2

The Future of Greece 2035

Technology, innovation and research are the main pillars supporting the country's transition from today to the future we envision. They are the driving forces behind the country's development and production model, citizens' relations with the state and institutions, and, ultimately, the country's international competitiveness. Based on the results of a comprehensive study conducted by the Special Secretariat of Foresight of the Presidency of the Government of the Hellenic Republic, the members of the panel will attempt to explain, from their perspectives, how these fundamental pillars will change various aspects of economic and social life in the near future. They will also shed light on the correlation between technology and strengthening citizens' trust in the state.

The European Vision for resilient Rural Areas. Building bridges between rural territories and cities.

The long-term Vision for the EU's rural areas aims to improve rural quality of life, achieve balanced territorial development and stimulate economic growth. The policies of the European Union support integrated spatial development and in particular, integrated Community Led Local Development (CLLD/LEADER), as an important tool in reducing inequalities that have the characteristic of geographical dispersion, because they contribute targeting to solve local problems, through the use of appropriate development tools. The main characteristic of Local development strategies is the 'bottom-up' approach, thus creating the conditions for a close, continuous, and multi-level cooperation between many and powerful actors at local level, such as elected officials, local administration, business representatives and civil society. These policies basically aim at the joint management of natural resources, strengthening economic interconnections, creating networks at various levels, developing common infrastructures, and promoting innovative, smart and green policies.

Environmental governance for integrated management and socio-economic prosperity

Governance encompasses a wider, more inclusive, and extensive set of perspectives on the study of institutional arrangements compared to the traditional governing or government. We focus on environmental policy practices related to concrete actions, for example, in agriculture, biodiversity and nature management, land-use management for human well-being. Setting targets and objectives of policies, selecting instruments based on a correct conceptualization of human behavior is full of potential pitfalls. These "disruptions" may be seen as types of governance failures or governance risks that pose risks to sustainably managing ecosystems and their services.

Tackling the challenges of Climate Crisis on Potable Water

Water leakage is acknowledged as one of the most important issues that drinking water supply systems are facing worldwide. Non-Revenue Water (NRW) (most of which is water leakage) is estimated to 346 million m³ per day and its cost/value is estimated to 39 billion USD per year. Climate Crisis makes the problem even bigger, as the Water amounts needed especially in Summer Months grow every year. Municipalities that face those problems, work alongside Large Companies and Universities, and develop Decision Control and Support systems for leakage detection and optimal management of water supply systems in an automated manner.

New Regulation “Greek Agricultural Insurance Organisation” (ELGA)

The political Leadership of the Ministry of Rural Development and Food and the Administration of the Hellenic Agricultural Insurance Organization have agreed to ensure the financial robustness of the Organization, aiming at the creation of a strong Agricultural Insurance Agency whose finances allow the fulfillment of its obligations despite the heavy damages caused by the extreme weather phenomena. The extreme weather phenomena which are a consequence of the climate crisis cause severe damage to cultivations of plant and animal life, resulting in expenses for compensation for damages which are covered by the ELGA Regulation, to exceed by a long shot from the income from the special insurance levy. It is necessary to find new resources to ensure the financial stability of ELGA both at the level of the current Regulation and in the future with a new Regulation which will include compensations for new risks and new threats. Reformation of the administrative structure and operation is required by ELGA, aiming at reinforcing the effectiveness of the Organization. The digital transformation of the Organization will strengthen the relationship between producers and Organization and will significantly reduce the period between personalized assessments and payment of compensations.

- o Discussion

Pop2See Smart Class, a system of devices that helps in the integration of blind students into General Schools.

A robotics team from Greece that envisions a better world for all.

Their journey started back in July 2021, when they started researching about blind students and their daily school life.

By combining their research with robotics, they decided to develop a solution, called Pop2See Smart Class that will allow blind students to attend the General School Curriculum, with or without parallel support.

Pop2See Smart Class' vision is to offer them the right to choose, as lack of sight should not limit a person's mind or personal development.

Pop2See team won 1st place in the Greek qualifiers and, together with one more team, they represented Greece in the World Robot Olympiad 2022, in November in Dortmund, in Germany.

The Observatory is the regional point of reference for the Region of Western Greece with the aim of improving the effectiveness of social integration actions and the fight against poverty, discrimination and social exclusion. The ultimate goal is the formulation and implementation of specific relief policies, but also the strengthening of social cohesion and solidarity.*

At the same time, it will contribute to supplying the National Mechanism for Social Integration with data and elements for the targeted implementation of pilot (in a spatial or thematic field) innovative interventions for social cohesion in the Region as well as in the planning and implementation of immediate intervention actions in cases of emergency.

DAY 2 FRIDAY, MARCH 17 | 21.00 | CONCERT

MUSICAL HERITAGE REHABILITATION FOR MULTIPLIER CULTURAL EMPOWERMENT - HERMES

By the Classical Music Orchestra of the Department of Music Studies, University of Ioannina and the Polyphonic Choir of Patras

The symphony orchestra of the Department of Music Studies of the University of Ioannina, which is the first complete university symphony orchestra in Greece at a regional level, in collaboration with the Polyphonic Choir of Patras, come to highlight a rare cultural heritage originating from Greek musicians of the Ionian Islands of the 19th century and the beginning of the 20th century. The Ionian Islands (Heptanese) were the center of development of modern Greek music. Until Athens took precedence, the Ionian Islands were a special artistic peak of regional Hellenism due to their proximity to Italy and the previous Venetian Occupation. The first Greek symphonic music was created there, which unfortunately remains largely unknown to this day.

Music Composers such as Antonios Livalis (1814-1842), Nikolaos Metaxas Tzanis (1824-1907), Dimitrios Andronis (1865-1918?) and Lavrentios Kamilleris (1875-1956) wrote masterpieces in the field of symphonic and dramatic music. The Department of Music Studies of the University of Ioannina, joining forces in research, musicology and performance, presents selected works of the aforementioned music composers for soloists and orchestra.

EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES - EDU ACTS

In cooperation with the University of Patras and the University of Peloponnese*

Convinced that youth is the most dynamic part of our society, the Regional Growth Conference enables dozens of young people to take part in the RGC experience by participating in the largest event on Regional Development.

For this year's annual conference, the RGC 2023, which will take place from March 16-18 in Patras at the Conference and Cultural Centre of the University of Patras, will collaborate with the University of Patras and the University of Peloponnese and will be offering free educational activities aimed at undergraduate and postgraduate students.

More specifically, every year the RGC, together with the University of Patras, organizes a three-day Workshop. The topic of this year's Workshop is "TBA", and it has been designed to offer an interdisciplinary approach to the above topic through lectures, presentations, group works and on-site visits to relative local businesses and organizations to offer to the students combined theoretical and empirical knowledge.

Furthermore, for its 4th consecutive year of cooperation with the Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering of the University of the Peloponnese, the RGC will be organizing a Spring School, which will take an in-depth look at "TBA".

Apart from participating in educational activities, at the RGC 2023 students have the opportunity to meet important personalities from Greece and abroad, and attend keynote speeches, sessions and interviews.

RGC 2023 continues to innovate, embracing new trends in science and collaborating with the country's universities. Over the three days of the Conference, the participating students will have the opportunity to deepen their knowledge on various scientific fields and draw on the know-how of the participating professors and researchers from the Universities of Patras and the Peloponnese.
